We also take a look at what's happening in Bangladesh, Iran and Iraq as three countries mark important anniversaries in 2019. Lessons from Bhutan's Gross National Happiness (Image: Heathcliff O'Dwyer) The teachings of the late Indian spiritual leader, Mahavira, led to the creation of the concept of Gross National Happiness - GNH. Now, if the government of Bhutan can be believed, this could be the perfect way to measure economic success. In an interview with the Financial Times, Bhutan's Prime Minister Lotay Tshering, talks about the introduction of the new GNH ranking system.

“It’s economic success that brings happiness, not the other way round,” he said. “In my government’s sense, there has been a lot of development. So much has happened for the good of Bhutan.”

(Image: Heathcliff O'Dwyer) Tshering acknowledged that a lot has gone wrong in the past - but pointed out that GDP figures do not necessarily translate into a positive GNH ranking. The Nation reports how Bhutan is ahead of Japan and South Korea when it comes to its GNH ranking. He also revealed that the Bhutanese government has been aiming to improve its GNH ranking for the last two years, and had recently met with the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development, an international economic forum, for a discussion on the concept.
